

What is ANNOTATED Bibliography?

Annotated Bibliography = Bibliography + Notes

Bibliography = A list of books and articles about one topic

Annotated = With notes and comments

Annotated Bibliography = A list of sources + your notes about each source

Example:

You write the book information + You write what the book is about + You write your opinion about the book

Why Do We Write Annotated Bibliography?

1. To remember important information from sources
2. To show you read and understood the sources
3. To help you choose good sources for your research
4. To practice critical thinking
5. To help other students find good sources

Remember:

An annotated bibliography helps YOU think deeply about your sources!

Parts of an Annotation

Every annotation has 3 parts:

Part 1: Citation (Reference)

- Write the full reference (author, year, title, etc.)
- Use your citation style (APA, IEEE)

Part 2: Annotation (Your notes)

- Summary: What is the source about?
- Evaluation: Is the source good? Why?
- Analysis: How can you use this source?

What is Critical Evaluation?

Critical evaluation means you think carefully about the source and ask questions:

Key Questions:

- Is this information correct?
- Who wrote this? Are they an expert?
- Is this source new or old?
- Does the writer have a bias (one-sided opinion)?
- Is this source useful for my research?

What is Critical Analysis?

Critical analysis means you think about HOW you will use the source:

Key Questions:

- How does this source help my research?
- Does this source agree or disagree with other sources?
- What new information does this source give me?
- Can I use this source for my introduction? My argument?
- What are the strengths and weaknesses of this source?

How to Write: Summary

Summary = Short description of the main ideas

Writing Practice:

Use present tense: "The author explains..." "This article shows..."

Keep it short: 2-3 sentences

Focus on main ideas only

Use your own words (do not copy)

Example:

This article explains how business etiquette is different in countries around the world. The author shows that business travelers need to change their behavior to fit local customs. The article gives examples from France, Germany, and India. It discusses important topics like punctuality (being on time), dress codes, communication styles, and meeting behavior in different cultures

How to Write: Evaluation

Evaluation = Your judgment about the quality of the source

Writing Practice - Useful Phrases:

- "This is a reliable source because..."
- "The author is an expert in..."
- "This source is recent/current..." (new information)
- "This source is well-researched because..."
- "However, this source has limitations..." (problems)
- "The information is biased because..."

Evaluation Example

Example:

This is a useful source for business travelers. The article is recent (December 2024), so the information is current. The source comes from Booking.com for Business, which is a well-known travel company that helps businesses plan trips. The article gives specific examples from different countries, which makes it practical and easy to understand. However, this source has some limitations. It is written by a travel company, not by cultural experts or researchers, so it focuses mainly on travel situations. The source does not provide scientific research or academic references to support the information.

Remember:

Always explain WHY you think the source is good or bad. Give reasons!

How to Write: Analysis

Analysis = How you will use this source in your research

Writing Practice - Useful Phrases:

- "This source will help me understand..."
- "I can use this source to support my argument about..."
- "This source provides important background information on..."
- "This source disagrees with [other source] about..."
- "This source fills a gap in my research about..."

Analysis Example

Example:

This source will help me understand the basic rules of business etiquette in different countries. I can use this information in my research about international business communication. The specific examples from France, Germany, and India will be useful for showing how cultures are different. This source is good for an introduction or for giving practical examples. However, I will need to find more academic sources to support my main arguments. This article does not discuss why these cultural differences exist, so I need other sources to explain the deeper cultural reasons.

Remember:

Connect the source to YOUR research topic!

Complete Example

BIBLIOGRAPHY FORMAT

APA FORMAT (7th Edition)

Booking.com for Business. (2024, December 4). International business culture: Corporate etiquette around the world. Booking.com for Business.

<https://business.booking.com/en-us/business-travel-resources/blog/international-business-culture-corporate-etiquette-around-the-world/>

IEEE FORMAT

[1] Booking.com for Business, "International business culture: Corporate etiquette around the world," Booking.com for Business, Dec. 4, 2024. [Online]. Available:

<https://business.booking.com/en-us/business-travel-resources/blog/international-business-culture-corporate-etiquette-around-the-world/>

Complete Example Annotation

Example:

This article explains how business etiquette is different in countries around the world. The author shows that business travelers need to change their behavior to fit local customs. The article gives examples from France, Germany, and India. It discusses important topics like punctuality (being on time), dress codes, communication styles, and meeting behavior in different cultures

This source will help me understand the basic rules of business etiquette in different countries. I can use this information in my research about international business communication. The specific examples from France, Germany, and India will be useful for showing how cultures are different. This source is good for an introduction or for giving practical examples. However, I will need to find more academic sources to support my main arguments. This article does not discuss why these cultural differences exist, so I need other sources to explain the deeper cultural reasons.

This source will help me understand the basic rules of business etiquette in different countries. I can use this information in my research about international business communication. The specific examples from France, Germany, and India will be useful for showing how cultures are different. This source is good for an introduction or for giving practical examples. However, I will need to find more academic sources to support my main arguments. This article does not discuss why these cultural differences exist, so I need other sources to explain the deeper cultural reasons.

Word count: Approximately 260 words

Critical Evaluation Checklist

When you evaluate a source, ask these questions:

- ✓ Authority: Is the author an expert?
- ✓ Currency: Is the source recent/current?
- ✓ Accuracy: Is the information correct? Are there references?
- ✓ Purpose: Why did the author write this? To inform? To persuade?
- ✓ Objectivity: Is the information balanced or biased?
- ✓ Coverage: Does the source cover the topic well?

Writing Practice Tips

1. Use Academic Language:

- The author argues... / claims... / suggests...
- The study shows... / demonstrates... / reveals...
- This source provides... / presents... / offers...

2. Be Specific:

✗ "This is a good source."

✓ "This is a reliable source because the author uses recent data from 2024."

Common Mistakes to Avoid

- ✗ Writing too much - Keep annotations short (150-200 words)
- ✗ Copying sentences from the source - Use your own words
- ✗ Only writing summary - You need evaluation AND analysis
- ✗ Not explaining your opinions - Always give reasons
- ✗ Forgetting to connect to your research - Show how you will use the source

Remember:

Quality is better than quantity!

Step-by-Step Writing Process

Step 1: Read the source carefully

Step 2: Write the bibliography in correct format

Step 3: Write a short summary (2-3 sentences)

Step 4: Evaluate the source (Is it good? Why?)

Step 5: Analyze how you will use it

Step 6: Read your annotation again - Check for mistakes

Practice Activity

Choose one source about your research topic.

Write an annotation that includes:

1. Summary: What is the source about?
2. Evaluation: Is it a good source? Why?
3. Analysis: How will you use it in your research?

Remember:

Use the phrases and questions from this presentation to help you!

Key Takeaways

- An annotated bibliography has citations + your notes
- Each annotation has three parts: Summary, Evaluation, Analysis
- Critical evaluation = Think about the quality of the source
- Critical analysis = Think about how you will use the source
- Always explain your opinions with reasons
- Use academic language and phrases
- Connect the source to your research